

SORG Engineering and Design Office Anyang celebrates 10th anniversary

In 2007 SORG opened a small design office in China. Therefore, the aptly named SORG Engineering and Design Office Anyang (normally shortened to SORG Anyang) celebrated its 10th anniversary in May this year.

What began as a small office with just 6 staff has become an important part of the worldwide SORG Group and now employs 14 specialists. A further expansion of the capacity is currently planned.

The development of the Chinese operation is mirrored in the changes in the work carried out there over the past 10 years. Initially the office carried out preparation work for the main drawing office in Lohr, Germany. They now work independently to produce complete the design and engineering for steelwork and plant components using AutoCAD Mechanical 2D and Inventor 3D to make the drawings.

Guests of honour at the celebration were members of the Anyang council and the local Hightech district who joined the staff of the SORG Anyang office and representatives from SORG Germany. After greeting the assembled guests in Chinese SORG Managing Director Alexander Sorg went on to thank the town and district representatives for their assistance during the establishment of the Company 10 years previously and especially for their continued support up to the present time.
